A word about modern engines and Fuel System Cleanings.

Several years ago, most vehicle manufacturers began building engines using a direct injection technology. This technology has been around for a very long time. Originally it was used in aircrafts in the early 1900's. This system works by injecting fuel into the combustion chamber along with a large amount of air to create a very high compression ratio without using a lot of fuel. This creates an efficient, powerful, and low-emission engine. While this is what we all want, it does not come without a price. Not only are the components expensive, but they are also known to cause problems on these vehicles (such as carbon buildup and injectors clogging due to very precise tolerances and very high pressures). Therefore it is important that these systems are maintained before carbon buildup occurs in a preventative measure which the manufacturers are not prescribing. Also, many of the manufacturers are now using turbos on small engines to produce the power that we demand. Turbo-charged engines run under higher pressures and require additional maintenance. L&M offers several options when it comes to fuel system cleanings and maintenance. Please be sure to ask if your vehicle needs this maintenance.

Charlie's Recipe

Little Gem Salad with Green Goddess Dressing

For the dressing:

1 cup (8 fl. oz./250 ml) mayonnaise
1/2 cup (4 oz./125 g) sour cream
1 garlic clove, minced
3 anchovy fillets, minced
1 cup (1 1/3 oz./40 g) minced fresh cilantro
1/4 cup (1/3 oz./10 g) minced fresh chives
1/4 cup (1/3 oz./10 g) minced fresh flat-leaf parsley
1 tsp. lime zest
1/4 cup (2 fl. oz./60 ml) fresh lime juice
1 Tbs. extra-virgin olive oil
Kosher salt and freshly ground pepper

For the salad:

4 to 6 rainbow carrots, peeled and thinly shaved with a vegetable peeler
4 to 6 heads Little Gem lettuce (or more if very small), halved lengthwise
4 to 6 radishes (red, green or a combination), trimmed and thinly shaved on a mandolin
1 cup (7 oz./220 g) fava beans, blanched
3 hard-cooked eggs, peeled and thinly sliced
Fresh cilantro sprigs for garnish
Freshly ground pepper
