

RODENTS IN MY ENGINE?!

Some of you may have heard about this or have even experienced it yourself. The pet you never realized you've had. So, what's the deal? First, rodents in particular like to take up residence in the engine bay of your vehicle because it's warm, cozy, and ready for them in the evening when you get home and park. It's a familiar place for them. Imagine a family of rodents anxiously waiting for you to arrive home, with THEIR home! Unfortunately, allowing them to reside under your hood can create some serious issues. We have seen entire engine wiring harnesses and fuel tanks that require replacement due to becoming a tasty snack! We're talking about thousands of dollars of damage here. If you are worried about these pesky critters chewing up the inside of your vehicle (not to mention your wallet), we recommend a thorough cleaning, repellent, and an Rodent Defense Module to prevent their inevitable return.

Rodent Defense Module

Our skilled technicians are able to install and connect the module properly to ensure maximum protection.

Rodent Defense Modules use a combination of ultrasounds and LED flashlights to keep pesky critters from entering your vehicle.
